

Angels descend on Botany

A host of angels are coming to Botany Town Centre to help tired shoppers, offer directions, hold doors open and to commit other random acts of kindness.

The angels will be around from until Christmas eve from 11am to 3pm, wearing glossy, feathered wings.

"We are very excited to have our Botany angels out and about to reward our customers and to show the spirit of giving and goodwill that Christmas is all about.

"We know our shoppers and store attendants will appreciate and share the angels' philosophy," says town centre manager Jennifer Manning.

Staff and shoppers may be rewarded with sweets or gift vouchers for random acts of kindness.

These could include pushing wheelchairs, carrying packages for over-burdened mums or elderly shoppers, giving exemplary customer service, giving directions to an uncertain stranger, letting someone else into a car-park space or picking up rubbish.

Christmas helpers: Amy and Alexandra Jordan will be spreading goodwill at Botany Town Centre.

Photo: SHANE WENZLICK

Fairies help out shoppers

By JACKIE RUSSELL

EVERYONE could do with a little kindness from a guardian angel at this time of the year.

That's why two white-winged wonders descended from the heavens to spread some seasonal good cheer at Botany Town Centre.

Rewarding shoppers for random acts of kindness, angels Amy and Alexandra had the power to improve everybody's day.

"A lady fell over and another lady helped, so we rewarded her kindness," says Alexandra.

"Another lady was walking towards me with all these bags looking determined. I said, 'you look like you need a coffee'."

The angels treated the woman to a complimentary caffeine charge and sent her floating on her way.

Good spirited, generous and happy, these two ethereal floated through Botany until Christmas Eve.

FEATHERED FRIENDS: Simone De Swardt, 2, is fascinated by Alexandra Angel's saintly wings. Amy Angel looks on.

Times photo Bruce Nicholsc